30 yards. The effect of this volley was terrible. Morrisey was killed instantly, his brains being scattered over the boat and crew, and Dillon was mortally wounded, never recovering consciousness and dying shortly afterward in the boat. Seaman Rindors had his fingers the hand, but kept bravely to his board stroke oar. The starboard cars were riddled and most of them shat-tcred; besides, the boat was pierced by the Remington balls and made water fast.

OPENED FIRE.

As soon as possible after recovering the first shock we opened fire with the Colt and rifles. The ambush was so complete that we could not see at what to fire, not even the smoke. The Colt was thrown out of action before the second volley. The order was given to back oars, but as only a few could be used, the others being shattered, the tide drifted us on a sandbank. Ellsworth, Edwards and Woodbury tried to swim the boat out, but did not succeed. The volleys poured in on us from the left bank in quick succession, wounding OPENED FIRE.
